DCI WEEKLY

PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Media Relations

Unless some more newsworthy event suddenly crops up, we again expect to be featured in U.S. News and World Report. Copies will be available early Monday morning.

Despite the presence of the seeds of several possible news stories on CIA, we have this week received no inquiries on the latest changes in CIA management positions, Soviet defense spending, Nicaragua and our oversight procedures. This is mildly surprising.

Academic Relations

As you know, seven college presidents visited all day Friday at Headquarters. They all seemed to believe their day was informative and well spent.

We entertained 130 college students this week from Georgetown University Institute on Comparative Political and Economic Systems which is a composite drawn from colleges and universities nation-wide. Since this group has had high potential for recruitment, it was also addressed by the Director of Personnel himself.

Our representative at the Intelligence Symposium at the U.S. Air Force Academy last week reported that the affair was quite successful. The proceedings are expected to lead to an eventual textbook on intelligence, in connection with which we hope and expect to be consulted at length.
